Vietnam MIAs identified

The remains of three U.S. soldiers previously unaccounted for from the war in Vietnam have been identified and were buried as a group at Arlington National Cemetery Nov. 8. They are Capt. Ronald D. Briggs, Philadelphia, Sgt. 1st Class Robert C. O'Hara, Lost Nation, Iowa; and Maj. David E. Padgett, Washington, Ind. On Feb. 6, 1969, Padgett and O'Hara were crewmembers on a UH-1H Huey helicopter, flying Briggs and three other soldiers on an emergency resupply mission in South Vietnam.

Bush declares zero tolerance toward Iraq

Saddam Hussein must comply with U.N. resolutions or the U.S. will lead a coalition to disarm him

By Linda D. Kozaryn
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Zero tolerance is America's current policy toward Iraq, President Bush declared Tuesday.

Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein must comply with U.N. resolutions or the United States will lead a coalition to disarm him, Bush said during a visit to the District of Columbia Metropolitan Police Department Operations Center.

"We're through negotiations," he said. "There's no more time. The man must disarm. ...This kind of deception and delay, all that's over with. The country is committed to making the world more peaceful by disarming Saddam Hussein. It's just as simple as that. There's a zero tolerance policy now."

For the past 11 years, Saddam has tried to deceive the world, Bush noted, "and we're through with it."

The president discounted the Iraqi parliament's rejection of the U.N. resolution passed Nov. 8 calling for disarmament.

"The Iraqi parliament is nothing but a rubber stamp for Saddam Hussein," Bush said. "There's no democracy. This guy's a dictator. And so we'll have to see what he says."

U.N. Resolution 1441 recognizes the threat Iraq's continued noncompliance with previous U.N. resolutions poses.

The resolution gives Iraq 30 days from the date of the resolution to provide "a current, accurate, full and complete declaration of all aspects" of its weapons of mass destruction programs. Iraq must provide information on all delivery systems and on all aspects of its research and development programs. The resolution forces Iraq to provide "immediate, unimpeded, unconditional, and unrestricted access" to areas in the country.

Army Gen. Tommy Franks, combatant commander of U.S. Central Command and speaking in Florida this morning, said President Bush has not made a decision to go to war in Iraq. He said the president has decided, however, that Saddam's "cheat, retreat" tactics and flouting of U.N. Security Council resolutions "will not stand."

The decision to be made is up to Saddam Hussein and his regime, Franks said. "The only road that is not available to us in the future," he added, "...permits the reconstitution of weapons of mass destruction which, at some point, could fall or be placed in the hands of state-sponsored or transnational terrorists."

America's future, the general said, must be secured by precluding the possibility of weapons of mass destruction and terrorism coming together.

CSAF: It's time for a new way of thinking

WASHINGTON — Saying it's time for a new way of thinking," the Air Force's highest ranking airman says significant change has already begun and more is on the horizon for how the Air Force will focus on the unique development of every individual.

We call it Force Development and it applies equally to all of us: officer, enlisted, and civilian, across all specialties in our Air Force," said Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. John P. Jumper.

The new personnel development concept will focus on training, education and experience, especially how you are assigned to get that experience, Jumper said. We intend to open the aperture on what is considered beneficial education and training experience.

For example most officers will no longer be required to have an advanced academic degree in order to be competitive for promotion to lieutenant colonel, the general said.

Just like many of you, I too spent many hours in night school to earn a master's degree. Why? So I could get promoted, Jumper said.

Today there is a career path choice that encourages development of specialists with a deep perspective in a particular area, the general said.

Up until now the focus was on competency skills in a single Air Force Specialty Code. Career development was often left to chance.

Day after day you demonstrate that your expertise is our greatest asset, and I truly believe your continued training and development are our wisest investment, he said.

Our goal in implementing our new Force Development construct is to make that investment in all career fields and all ranks more deliberately than we do today.

Most importantly, he added, the new emphasis reflects a sincere approach by the Air Force to ensure airmen have time for other priorities such as family.

Day after day you demonstrate that your expertise is our greatest asset, and I truly believe your continued training and development are our wisest investment.

— John P. Jumper
Air Force Chief of Staff

Each person's career development will be managed through professional development teams, officials said. Over the next six months the Air Force will redesign how the Air Force Personnel Center assigns people to schools and jobs.

Rather than having assignment officers think about filling vacancies, there will be teams dedicated to developing individuals.

First up: some officers waiting for the fall announcement of Intermediate Service School attendees may get welcomed but unexpected news. Many majors will focus on packing their bags for traditional courses. Others, however, will be surprised to find out they are heading for a master's degree program through the Air Force Institute of Technology in Ohio, Naval Post Graduate School in California or the Joint Military Intelligence College in the Washington, D.C., area.

Our team reviewed every candidate's record and tried to send the right people to the right kind of development course, and not just to the cookie-cutter courses, said Lt. Gen. Richard Tex Brown, deputy chief of staff for personnel at the Pentagon.

There are some cases where it just makes more sense, for the officer and for the Air Force, to send these folks to get a different kind of master's degree than is offered at traditional PME, Brown said. The new educational opportunities will be considered equally valuable to an officer's professional growth, he said.

This is the way of the future.

Wolf Pack area defense council is here for you

By Capt. Heather Larson
Area Defense Counsel

The Area Defense Counsel sees many Wolf Pack members at what are not their best moments.

These counselors act independently on behalf of clients, because they do not fall under the base's chain of command.

Often, by the time troops get to the ADC office, they have already dug their own hole through unfavorable actions or words.

In an effort to educate and possibly prevent airmen from needing to visit the ADC office, here are a few tips to help stay out of trouble:

□ Alcohol The majority of cases the ADC deals with have some tie to alcohol. No matter how drunk you were, drinking will never be accepted as an excuse.

□ Bouncing checks if you don't have the money in the bank to cover it, don't buy it.

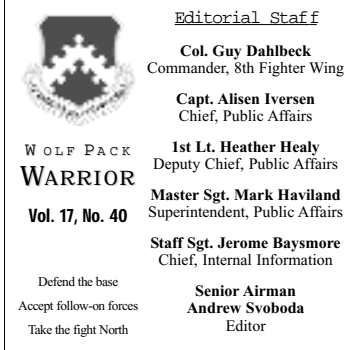

□ Perception is everything. Watch the situations you put yourself in and look at yourself as others might see you.

□ Comply with the cops. When security forces ask for your ID, just do it, no questions asked.

□ Trust the system. Be smart. Always remember your Article 31 rights and don't be afraid to ask to talk to an attorney before you answer questions.

□ Remember you're in the military. That uniform you wear cost many people their lives, and your stupidity may cost you the right to wear it.

Kunsan weapons troops undergo inspection

PACAF eyes help Wolf Pack mission, ensure compliance

By Senior Airman Andrew Svoboda
8th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

A weapons inspection team from Pacific Air Forces headquarters inspected Kunsan troops in the 8th Maintenance Group as well as the wing weapons safety office this week.

The Munitions Activities Standardization Program inspection team looked at all ammo, armament, and flight line loader programs and operations to ensure compliance.

This PACAF level visit helps identify areas within the wing's munitions, armament, weapons safety, and weapons loading areas that can be improved and assists units with solving on-going problems, said Master Sgt. Rick Roby, 8th Maintenance Squadron.

The MASP team uses checklists, publications and technical orders to determine compliance with Air Force standards.

Although the MASP is not a rated inspection, the munitions and weapons community approach it as such.

In preparation, the three major functional areas being inspected collectively completed self inspection checklists, requested and received 7th Air Force, PACAF, and Osan Air Base staff assistance visits.

All three sections performed a head-to-toe inspection of everything our Air Force Instruction requests us to do, said Roby.

The ammo section is responsible for ensuring the wing has serviceable munitions for training and combat. This includes munitions for the jets, explosives and flares for egress and life support, the Army patriot missiles and security forces small arms. During preparation, the ammo section found its biggest challenge to be continuity, said Senior Master Sgt. Kevin Fallen, 8th Maintenance Squadron.

Due to the high turnover rate, we've been fixing a lot of discrepancies, but the changes we've made will hopefully help our programs run smoother in the future, said Fallen.

Armament troops are responsible for maintaining the guns installed on F-16s. This includes missile launch equipment, weapons release programs and the 22mm gun systems. They also oversee the war reserve material.

WEAPONS INSPECTION: Senior Airman Jeremy Coppack and Staff Sgt. Toni Ploeger, 8th Maintenance Squadron weapons lead crewmembers, upload the Joint Direct Attack Munitions bomb as weapons evaluator Master Sgt. Todd Hill looks on. Pacific Air Forces' weapons evaluation team performed their annual inspection of Kunsan this week.

The weapons standardization and flightline loading section is responsible for making sure all weapons load crews are trained. This inspection marks the first time PACAF has inspected since the Wolf Pack began using the Joint Direct Attack Munitions bombs.

Many of our load crews were trained on loading J-DAMS well ahead of Kunsan actually dropping them, said Chief Master Sgt. William DeLoach, 8th Maintenance Group wing weapons manager. Additionally, we had outside agencies like Osan and 7th Air Force come down to give us a fresh set of eyes and offer a new perspective on our operations.

MAASP visits are conducted annually in short tour areas and every two years at long-tour bases to help provide continuity.

Through inspections like these, we can ensure the Wolf Pack has the tools to be combat ready, said Lt. Col. Sutterfield, 8th Maintenance Squadron commander. "Putting bombs on target is a key to being successful at taking the fight north. That makes this inspection a crucial part of the Wolf Pack mission.

Troops deploy for joint-service exercise in Japan

By 1st Lt. Heather Healy
8th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Last week a group of Wolf Pack members took off from the 8th Fighter Wing to participate in this year's Keen Sword '02 exercise in Tsuiki, Japan.

Keen Sword is a combined field-training exercise that brings together operational assets from the Air Force, Navy, Army, Marine Corps and Japanese Air Self Defense Force to exercise defending Japan against foreign aggression.

This is the first time members of the Wolf Pack have deployed to participate in Keen Sword.

Training scenarios will have them working with JASDF F-16s from Komatsu Air Base and F-15s from Chitose AB, C-130s and C-21s from Yokota AB, KC-135s and E-3Bs from Kadana AB, and Marine F/A-18s from Marine Corps Air Station Iwakuni, Japan.

For pilots who participate in Keen Sword, this is an opportunity to train and fight against Marine and Navy aviators as well as Japanese coalition pilots, said Lt. Col. John Colombo, 35th Fighter Squadron commander.

However, the air war aspect of the exercise is only one piece of the puzzle.

The exercise is a highly coordinated effort that includes an aircraft carrier battle group patrolling the Sea of Japan, Marines performing amphibious landings and soldiers participating in ground maneuvers.

The complexity of the exercise will be a particular challenge for those serving in support functions such as maintenance, logistics, weather, and medical career fields.

For them it's an opportunity to validate our capability to deploy and to integrate personnel from different organizations into a single, effective team capable of getting the mission done, said Colombo.

Wolf Pack personnel deployed to Keen Sword are scheduled to return later this month.

CATCHING THE LEAD: Col. Scott West, 8th Operations Group commander, hands the 80th Fighter Squadron command and guidon to Lt. Col. Eric Schnitzer last Friday. Schnitzer comes to Kunsan from Misawa Air Base, Japan, where he was the 13th Fighter Squadron operations officer. Lt. Col. John M. Fyfe, the outgoing commander, moves on to Shaw Air Force Base, S.C., where he will serve as the 9th Air Force deputy combat commander.

Last WWII Comanche Code Talker visits Pentagon, Arlington Cemetery

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — After meeting with the defense secretary and other top Pentagon officials Nov. 5, Charles Chibitty, the last surviving World War II Comanche code talker, donned his feathered Indian chief's headdress and offered a prayer in the Pentagon Chapel for those killed in the terrorist attack on the building.

The aging code talker then placed a wreath and offered an Indian prayer at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington (Va.) National Cemetery. This marks the third time the 81-year old war veteran was honored at the Pentagon for his service to the nation.

His visits in 1992 and 1999 were also in November during National American Indian Heritage Month.

While meeting at the Pentagon with Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, Undersecretary of the Army Les Brownlee and Raymond F. DuBois Jr., deputy undersecretary of defense for installations and environment, Chibitty recounted his wartime experiences when his unit landed on the Normandy shores on "the first or second day after D-Day." After his unit hit Utah Beach, his first radio message was sent to another codetalker on an incoming boat. Translated into English, it said: "Five miles to the right of the designated area and five miles inland, the fighting is fierce and we need help."

"We were trying to let them know where we were so they wouldn't lob no shells on us," he explained with a chuckle. "I was with the 22nd Infantry Regiment of the 4th Infantry Division. We talked Indian and sent messages when need be. It was quicker to use telephones and radios to send messages because Morse code had to be decoded and the Germans could decode them. We used telephones and radios to talk Indian then wrote it in English and gave it to the commanding officer."

Chibitty said two Comanches were assigned to each of the 4th Infantry Division's three regiments. They sent coded messages from the front line to division headquarters, where other Comanches decoded the messages.

He said 20 Comanches signed up to be code talkers, but only 17 went to training at Fort Benning, Ga., and only 14 hit Utah Beach at Normandy. "None of us was killed, but two were wounded pretty badly; one was my cousin," Chibitty noted.

Brownlee asked him if he was hit and Chibitty said, "Heck, no. I was like a prairie dog. As soon as I heard a whistle, I'd dive in that hole. I was little then. I weighed 126 pounds and it didn't take long for me to dig my hole. My buddy weighed 240 pounds and some of them were more than six feet tall and they had to dig a long trench."

Speaking in the Comanche language, Chibitty gave Brownlee another example of a message code talkers sent to other units, then translated it for him: "A turtle is coming down the hedgerow. Get that stovepipe and shoot him."

"A turtle was a tank and a stovepipe was a bazooka," he explained. "We couldn't say tank or bazooka in Comanche, so we had to substitute something else. A turtle has a hard shell, so it was a tank."

Since there was no Comanche word for machine gun it became "sewing machine," Chibitty noted, "because of the noise the sewing machine made when my mother was sewing." Hitler, he said, was "posah-tai-vo," or "crazy white man."

There are no other words in his language to describe a bomber aircraft, so they said, "Daddy and I went fishing and we cut that catfish open and he's full of eggs. Well, that bomber was up there just like this catfish, it's full of eggs, too, so we called it a pregnant airplane."

"We got so we could send any message, word for word, letter for letter," Chibitty said. The Navajos did the same thing in the Pacific during World War II and the Choctaw used their language during World War I. There were other code talkers from other tribes, but if they didn't train like the Comanche and Navajos, how could they send a message like we did," he asked. "If they made a slight mistake, instead of saving lives, it could have cost a lot of lives."

In 1989, the French government honored the Comanche code talkers, including Chibitty, by presenting them the "Chevalier of the National Order of Merit." Chibitty has also received a special proclamation from the governor of Oklahoma. In 2001, Congress passed legislation authorizing the presentation of gold medals to Native Americans who served as code talkers during foreign conflicts.

"I felt I was doing something that the military wanted us to do and we did to the best of our ability, not only to save lives, but to confuse the enemy by talking in the Comanche language," he said. "We felt we were doing something that could help win the war."

Brownlee asked him if the Comanche language is written and Chibitty said, "There's a book, but you've got to be awfully damn smart to read it. It's not like alphabets, you have to learn the phonetics to pronounce the words."

The aging code talker then sang Silent Night in the Comanche language.

Chibitty said when he attended Indian school in the 1920s, teachers became angry with him because he was speaking the Comanche language. "When we got caught talking Indian, we got punished," he noted. "I told my cousin that they're trying to make little white boys out of us," he said.

Charles Chibitty, the last surviving World War II Comanche code talker, told Pentagon officials that teachers at the Indian school near Lawton, Okla., became angry with him for speaking the Comanche language in the early 1920s. Later the Army wanted Comanches to use their language as a code during World War II.

After joining the Army years later, he told his cousin, "They tried to make us quit talking Indian in school, now they want us to talk Indian."

The retired glazier visits schools to tell the youngsters about what code talkers did and how they did it. He said officials at Comanche headquarters near Lawton, Okla., are trying to preserve the language by teaching it to children.

"The service you and your buddies provided turned out to be invaluable," Brownlee told the aging veteran. "You had this way of speaking that nobody could translate. The way you used your language was of such great advantage to your country."

Before returning home to Tulsa, Okla., Chibitty spent some time with researchers at the U.S. Army Center for Military History for oral history sessions. The Army wants to preserve the history of the Comanche code talkers and Chibitty is the last one to tell the story from first-hand experience.

Wolf Pack airman wins trip to NFL game

By Staff Sgt. Jerome Baysmore
8th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

An 8th Maintenance Squadron munitions system journeyman was one of nine people Air Force-wide to win a free trip to Texas Stadium to watch the Cowboys and 49'ers game.

Airman 1st Class Timothy Fitzpatrick, and all members who won Air Force Services' Football Frenzy, were active Air Force club members.

"Football Frenzy is the coolest thing I ever won in my life," Fitzpatrick said. "It made me happy."

Fitzpatrick, not yet knowing he won, was called into work last week.

A formation of troops from his squadron looked on as Col. Gary Bryson, 8th Maintenance Group commander, tossed Fitzpatrick a football with four $50 bills attached to it to break the news.

"I thought I was in trouble because the shop called and said I had to be at work in an hour with my boots shined and my uniform ironed," he said.

"When I got there, the commander, my first sergeant and the [logistics group commander] were there. I thought I was going down," he said. "It was a complete surprise."

He said he plans to take his Dad to the game, and he never knew putting his name in a fishbowl in the Loring Club would earn him the trip.

The Football Frenzy contest awards three prizes annually.

Club members enter by submitting their names to a drawing for one of the three trips, with grand prizes that include vacations to the National Football League's Super Bowl and the Pro Bowl in Hawaii. These trips will be drawn for in upcoming months.

Air Force Services Agency, said the annual promotion, in its eighth year, started as a way to enhance club membership and provide benefits for members. The eight winners, and their guests, will receive roundtrip airfare, hotel accommodations, ground transportation and tickets to the game.

This year's activities include pregame activities with the Cowboys, a visit to the Texas Rangers baseball stadium and dinner in the Baseball Legends of the Game Museum. Plus, they get a private tour of Six Flags Over Texas amusement park.

Wolf Pack legal office makes owning a will easy, affordable

By Maj. Mark Allison
8th Fighter Wing Legal Office

It costs hundreds of dollars to hire a civilian attorney to prepare and execute a will, but military members are entitled to this service free of charge.

The attorneys at the 8th Fighter Wing Legal office here make obtaining and updating a will as easy as possible for the Wolf Pack.

"Having a current will is one of the most important things you can do for your family," said Maj. Teresa Barnes, 8th FW chief of law. "Military members with minor children or extensive property should have a will."

A last will and testament, more commonly referred to simply as a will, allows service-members to specify who receives their property and gives them the power to designate the guardian of their children in the event of a death.

"For the minimal effort it takes to come in, sit down with an attorney, and craft a will or update an old one, military members can save their families an enormous amount of trouble

Fast Facts

Wills are prepared between 9 and 11 a.m. Mondays and Wednesdays in the legal office and 2 to 4 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. No appointment is necessary. For more information concerning wills, call 782-4283 during a difficult period of time," said Barnes.

"If you and your spouse die without a will, the court will determine who the guardian of your children will be," she added.

Obtaining a will doesn't do any good, if it's not updated to reflect significant changes, such as the birth of a child or a marriage or divorce, said Barnes.

"If an individual has a will naming their spouse as a beneficiary, then gets divorced, significant problems could result when the executor tries to settle the estate," she said. "If you have children from a prior marriage, and you haven't completed a will since your divorce. An untimely death without a will may create an unintended benefit to the former spouse if they have custody of the children."

When obtaining a will, service-members name someone as their executor. If servicemembers don't want their property given to the people in accordance with state laws, they have the opportunity to express their desires in a will.

AFN crew keeps Wolf Pack informed

By Master Sgt. Mark Haviland
8th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Long before most people at Kunsan even think about abandoning their warm beds and dreams of “the world,” Airman James Sims is already well into his workday.

Though he doesn’t have to worry about juggling morning traffic reports with local news and playing enough music to keep from irritating commuters, the “voice of Wolf Pack Radio” has plenty to occupy his mind.

When he arrived here in late September — just two weeks out of technical school — the 21-year-old Air Force broadcaster found himself managing a balancing act as writer, producer and disc jockey behind a five-hour radio show five days a week.

“I think I have the coolest job in the Air Force,” Sims said. “It’s nice to have a job where you get feedback all the time — I’m always getting calls. I wasn’t expecting that.”

But the job is more than just spinning discs, according to the self-proclaimed music lover. The Wolf Pack’s resident DJ also selects and programs all the music — from Top 40 hits to R & B and classic rock — conducts live interviews, researches current information about the bands and music he plays, and records advertising “spots” for local events.

Like all members of Kunsan’s Armed Forces Network-Korea station, Sims’ path to acquiring those skills and becoming an Air Force broadcaster began at DoD’s Defense Information School at Fort Meade, Md.

“It was pretty fast paced,” Sims said of the 56-day training course.

According to the DINFOS Web site, the course teaches new recruits and retrainees “complex instruction in radio and television operations, broadcast writing, voice and diction and the use and practical operation of the electronic news gathering system.”

While about 75 percent of each class graduate, 50 percent never make it past the school’s mandatory voice audition, according to Tech. Sgt. Paul Hughes, AFN-K station manager here and former DINFOS instructor.

Most who do make it find themselves overseas, where most of the Air Force broadcasting jobs are located, working in different aspects of radio and television.

At Kunsan, where the station boasts a staff of only four people, every member of the team gets a shot at being a DJ, videographer, writer, editor, producer and director, Hughes said.

“Our job is to get the word out,” Hughes explained. “We want people here to know what’s going on around Kunsan, but we also want to tell the Wolf Pack story through radio and TV news stories that air throughout all of Korea and the Pacific.”

While the job has its challenges, it’s also rewarding, explained Hughes, who’s spent 13 years as an Air Force broadcaster and four years as a civilian sportscaster in Wayne, Neb.

“The last 13 years have been great,” he said. “Before enlisting, I’d only been to one state that didn’t border Nebraska. Since then, I’ve been to Italy, Spain, Portugal and Germany.”

Now on his second tour in Korea, Hughes also has the luxury of working entirely with a staff he helped train — all of them on their first tour as broadcasters.

Each week, in addition to Sims’ radio show, the team shoots, edits and compiles at least three video stories about life and achievements at Kunsan.

“I think we’re a valuable asset to base and Air Force morale,” said Staff Sgt. Davinia Seay, the staff’s newest member and a former communications-navigation systems specialist. “We may not turn wrenches, but we support everyone with information that affects their personal and professional lives and that they may not have time to track down on their own.”

And, while satellite technology, fiber optics and other advances make it easier than ever to collect and share information with the Wolf Pack, Seay said presenting it to them and the rest of PACAF is another story.

“Being new to the job, I’m still used to having a technical order detailing each and every step in a repair job,” she said. “Here, I have to use my creative side, there’s no book that says how to take each shot or do every interview.”

It’s a unique working environment with unique rewards, according to Airman Tony Plyler, who’s recently completed stories about the PACAF command chief visit, the First Term Airman Center, activities at the Sonlight Inn and the base’s last NEO exercise.

“The most rewarding aspect of my job is getting to meet all the people around the base and see how hard they work at their individual specialties,” Plyler said.

Of course, another reward is knowing the work is appreciated.

“It’s a pleasure, really, to be able to turn on a radio or TV and hear the latest music, watch a favorite show, or see news about people in your community and it’s something that everyone takes for granted until they get here,” Hughes said. “We’re really proud to be a part of making that a reality for people at Kunsan.”

Airman James Sims, the “voice of Wolf Pack Radio,” runs the audio board during the RoK’s Best Mix morning show.

Wolf Pack opens season with 2-0 win

By Staff Sgt. Chuck Walker
8th Communications Squadron

Coming off a second-place finish two weeks ago at the Korea-wide preseason basketball tournament at Osan, the Kunsan Men's Basketball team kicked-off the regular season last weekend with two wins at home.

The Wolf Pack got great play from Chris Blackmon and Stuart Howard, as well as role players Tony Pigford and Tim Parlor as Kunsan swept visiting Camp Hialeah 90-66 on Saturday and 86-83 in overtime Sunday.

In the two games, Kunsan proved it can blow-out a team when everything is clicking and gut-out wins when faced with adversity. This will prove vital as the season rolls along.

"Wins like these are going to help you down the road," said Wolf Pack coach Thomas Jones. "We blew them out on Saturday, and they came back and gave us a tough game [Sunday]. Now we know we can win big games and close games. In the preseason, we didn't do so well in close games. This time we came out on top and this experience will help."

In the overtime game, Kunsan proved to be up to the task.

After leading by as many as 10 points in the second half, the Wolf Pack watched Camp Hialeah come all the way back to lead by one point at 69-68 with 2:53 left in the game.

Curtis Rudolph got a rebound away from two Wolf

Pack defenders and put it in with three seconds left in regulation to send the game to overtime tied at 75-75.

In overtime, Howard and Blackmon picked their games up as Kunsan came out victorious.

Blackmon scored a game-high 23 points, Pigford tossed in 22 and Howard added 12 to lead the Wolf Pack. Tyrone Legrette led Camp Hialeah with 22 points and Robert Seals added 19.

"We showed we had a lot of heart in overtime," Blackmon said. "The game should not have gone into overtime, but we stuck together as a team and fought through it and came out on top."

As close as Sunday's game was, Saturday's game was just the opposite, with the Wolf Pack playing one of its best games.

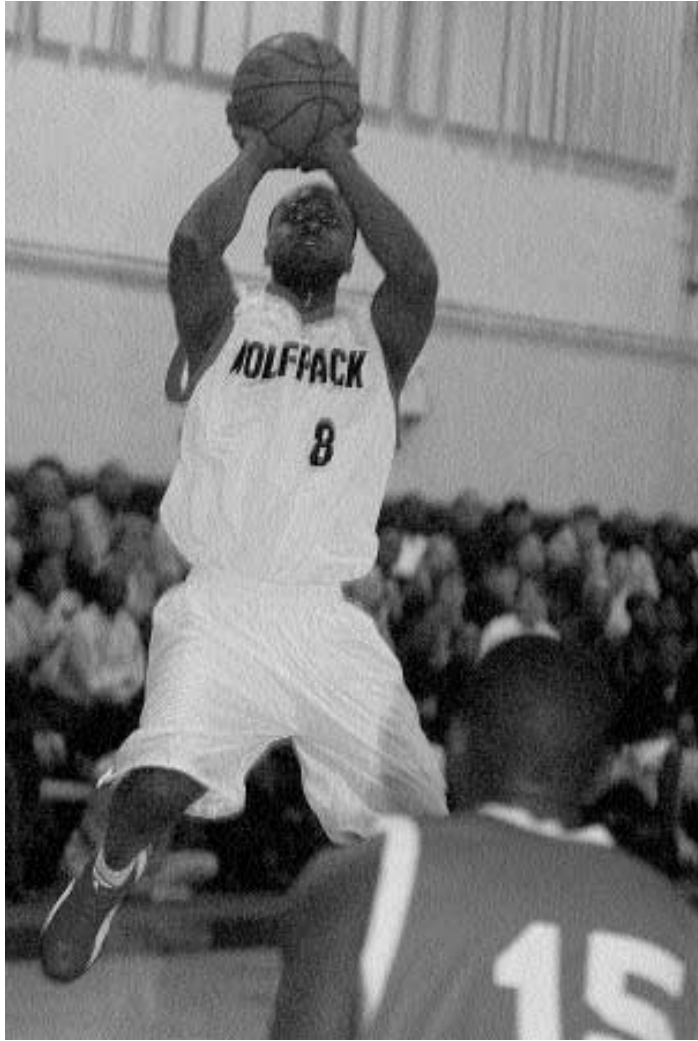

Leading 44-39 at halftime, Kunsan started the second half on a 9-0 run and never looked back.

Jones was impressed not only with the victory, but with his team's play, especially that of Parlor, who came up big off the bench for the Wolf Pack.

"He played great on defense and was taking it to the basket from the wing," said Jones.

Camp Hialeah coach Hubert Hill was proud of his team's effort in both games, despite being limited to only seven players.

"With only seven people, nobody can say Pusan ever gives up," Hill said. "Kunsan played great defense down the stretch. They have a great ball club. I think we've proven we have a good club as well, especially when we have our full team."

With two wins under its belt and a 2-0 record in the regular season, Blackmon says the team understands how it must play each game from here on out. "The main thing is to be consistent, play solid defense, take care of the ball and make free throws," Blackmon said. "If we do those things each time out, we'll beat anybody in this conference."

SPORTS SHORTS

Bench press competition

The competition is 11 a.m. Saturday at the fitness center. Sign up at the fitness center. For more information, call Staff Sgt. Angela Crawford at 782-4026/4039.

OSS/SUPS slip past COMM

Undefeated team sets sight on championship

By Staff Sgt. Chuck Walker
8th Communications Squadron

The 8th Operations Support Squadron/Supply intramural flag football team entered the playoffs Monday night a marked and depleted team.

Marked, because they were the lone undefeated team and the regular-season champion and depleted after losing their player/coach Luis Lopez and star running back Jeff Edmonds to a permanent change of station last week.

However, step one to the base championship was successful.

Hans Franz caught a 12-yard touchdown pass with 10 seconds left to lift OSS/Supply to a 13-12 come-from-behind victory against the No. 8 seeded 8th Communications Squadron.

Franz said OSS/Supply showed a lot of determination on the final drive.

"We called a post-in pattern and they wanted me to go to the middle of the end zone," Franz said. "I just had to out-fight the defender for the ball. We showed a lot of heart to come back like we did."

Earlier it looked like there might have been an upset brewing. After OSS/Supply led 7-6 at halftime, COMM went to work immediately in the second half.

On the first play from scrimmage in the second session, Ryan Clements caught a 57-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Jamie Willemmin to give COMM a 12-7 lead.

When COMM got the ball back after an OSS/Supply three-and-out, COMM was back in business.

COMM took the ball from its own 21-yard line and after Willemmin hit Brian Kelly on a 24-yard strike, it was first-and-goal at the OSS/Supply 15-yard line.

COMM was forced to punt after three penalties and a sack.

OSS/Supply began the drive from its own 15-yard line with less than two minutes remaining.

OSS/Supply quarterback Miguel Guadalupe hit Michael Galvan on a 26-yard pass to set his team up on the COMM 1-yard line.

Two plays later, Guadalupe sealed the deal with his pass to Franz.

Guadalupe led OSS/Supply throwing for 126 yards. Clements had a great game for COMM catching three balls for 105 yards including touchdowns of 37 and 57 yards. Willemmin threw for 129 yards for COMM.

"We believe in each other and we know we can run the no-huddle offense," Guadalupe said of OSS/Supply's offense. "We can move the ball quickly. We have faith. It was just a matter of taking care of the ball and moving down the field."

COMM coach Preston Perkins said his team gave up too many free yards on the last drive, putting OSS/Supply in position to make the winning score. He said COMM can come back from the loss in the double-elimination tournament.

"We gave up too many penalties and too many free yards," Perkins said. "We also had a couple of missed flags. We just need to build off of this. We lost by one point to the number one team in the playoffs in the last 10 seconds of the game."

"We're looking forward to playing again and hopefully we can be in the hunt for the title."

New OSS/Supply coach Karleb Sainte said he knows the rest of the base is gunning for his team and that his team, but his team feels no added pressure to win the playoffs.

"We talked about it, but we don't feel any pressure," Sainte said. "What we did this season was great."

"As long as we play as a team and play together, we'll come out on top. That's what we've been saying since day one, and we're saying it now."

The intramural championship football game is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. tonight.

Lady Wolf Pack goes 0-2 in season opener

By Staff Sgt. Chuck Walker
8th Communications Squadron

The Kunsan Women's Varsity basketball team opened the regular season against Camp Casey with two losses, 48-40 on Saturday and a blow-out 71-23 loss on Sunday.

The two losses leave the Lady Wolf Pack with only one course of action, to shake off what happened this past weekend and regroup for the rest of the season.

Assistant coach James Wright said the ladies can learn from the weekend games, especially the 48-point loss.

"These losses are good losses," Wright said. "If you lose by one, two or three points, you know that one play or turnover could've been the difference in you winning or losing. But a game like this is a teaching tool. We understand what we didn't do."

On Sunday, anything and everything that could go wrong, did go wrong for the Lady Wolf Pack. Kunsan committed 45 turnovers and made only two conventional baskets the entire second half.

Perhaps most disappointing is that the Lady Wolf Pack can play a great game, as they demonstrated Saturday night.

Trailing 24-16 at halftime, Kunsan opened the second half with a 14-4 run to take a 33-30 lead at the midway point of the second half.

But, the Lady Wolf Pack made only one basket, a three-pointer by Susan Alegria, down the stretch as Camp Casey pulled away and got the victory.

Kunsan has proven it can play in stretches. It just needs to do that on a more consistent basis, something Wright said will be emphasized this week in practice.

"I was impressed with our fundamentals," Wright said. "We just need to continue to work on them."

Despite the two losses, Wright said the team's spirit is up.

"Of course they're going to be upset, who wouldn't," Wright said. "But they are ready for the next challenge. We went 0-2 this weekend, but we're ready."

Pigskin Picks

In a week that left NFL fans and network commentators scratching their heads, Kunsan's Nicholas Holmstedt (12-2) and Chew Weathers (11-3) still managed to register amazing finishes.

The runners-up were Paul Hughes, Joe Gallegos, Thomas Tortoso and Rick Nelson, who all finished 10-4.
